John Bright on the United States.

The following remarks on the United States were delivered in the British House of Commons by the Hon. John Bright, on the 7th inst .:

There is a country called the United States of Amerca. Only on Tuesday night the very remarkable circumstance occurred-and I think the House will be of opinion that it is one worth notice-of two of the distinguished men being present listening to the debates of this House, who have occupied the position of President of the United States, [Hear, hear,] -a position, I venture to say, not lower in honor and in dignity than that of any crowned monarch on the surface of the globe. [Hear, hear.] The United States is precisely the country which is running with us the race of power and of greatness. Its population will, I believe, at the next census, exceed the population of the United Kingdom; in its manufactures and general industry it is by far the most formidable rival that the great manufacturers of this country now have to contend with; it has, I suppose, ten steamers for one steamer in this country : its magnificent steamships have crossed the Atlantic in a shorter time than the steamships of this country; the finest Wm.
